A Behaviourist Perspective on Purchase and Consumption. ABSTRACT - The status and plausibility of an interpretive account of consumer behaviour derived from operant psychology (behaviour analysis) is critically examined. It is argued that a model of purchase and consumption cannot be founded on an unreconstructed operant behaviourism.

A Behaviourist Perspective on Purchase and Consumption | ACR

Radical behaviorism was founded by B.F Skinner and agreed with the assumption of methodological behaviorism that the goal of psychology should be to predict and control behavior. Skinner, like Watson, also recognized the role of internal mental events, and while he agreed such private events could not be used to explain behavior, he proposed they should be explained in the analysis of behavior.
