Giotto di Bondone (Italian pronunciation: [d tto di bon do ne]; c. 1267 – January 8, 1337), known mononymously as Giotto (UK: / d to /, US: / d i to , d to /) and Latinised as Giottus, was an Italian painter and architect from Florence during the Late Middle Ages. He worked during the Gothic/Proto-Renaissance period. Giotto's contemporary, the banker ...

Giotto - Wikipedia

He travelled with his master Cimabue to Rome in or around 1280, and then on to Assisi, where Cimabue had been commissioned to paint frescoes. It is thought that the fresco cycle, The life of St Francis, is Giotto's work, but this is disputed by some historians because of the differences between them and the frescoes in the Arena Chapel in Padua.

DR. STEVEN ZUCKER: We're in the Gemaldegalerie in Berlin looking at a really spectacular panel painting by Giotto. This is "The Entombment of Mary." And it shows the Virgin Mary tenderly being lowered into her tomb, but it also, simultaneously, shows her spirit rendered as an infant being cradled by Christ in Heaven.
